

Alleanza Cattolica (Catholic Alliance) is an association of lay people who intend to study and spread the social doctrine of the Church.

Its aim is promoting and building “a society fit for man and in keeping with God’s plan” (Pope John Paul II). Its motto is: To the greater glory of God, also social!

Therefore, Alleanza Cattolica carries out an action of civil and cultural apostolate, which comes within the field of spiritual works of mercy.

In the training of members, spiritual means have the utmost importance, and among them rosary, eucharistic adoration, pilgrimage and spiritual exercises following St. Ignatius of Loyola’s method are favored. Moreover, training includes the study of official texts of the social Magisterium of the Church, the analysis as well as the interpretation of modern secularization process, that is society’s estrangement from God and His law.

Alleanza Cattolica’s official organ is the magazine Cristianità (Christendom).

A deepening

Alleanza Cattolica is a civic and cultural organization of catholic lay people – independent of any political party – whose aim is the positive and apologetic – therefore also polemic – spreading and realization of the social doctrine of the Church, that is the application of the changeless natural and Christian moral law to the changing historical context.

Alleanza Cattolica intends to realize the establishment of a Christian temporal order and is moved by political charity, namely the love of the common good. Its aim is promoting and building a society “fit for man and in keeping with God’s plan”(Pope John Paul II) – in the perspective of His greater glory, also social – , that is to say a society which can be justly called Christian, since it respects God’s rights and lives consciously inside the borders of Church’s doctrine and moral.

The hope of the establishment of such a civilization is sustained by Our Lady's promise at Fatima: "In the end, my Immaculate Heart will triumph".

Alleanza Cattolica carries out an action of civil and cultural training of "workers for a social restoration" and "true friends of the people" (Pope St. Pius X) through the study of the relevant catholic doctrine, as it is spread by the traditional or constant Magisterium of the Church, or deduced from its historical incarnations: the traditions of the individual catholic nations and their family, namely Christendom.

Particular attention is paid to forces aiming to establish the anti-Decalogue as well as the moral and doctrinal falsehood; this implies a specific description of the historical process going from the crisis of Renaissance and Protestantism to Communism and onward. Such a process is the Revolution trying to enthrone itself in the place of God and His law.

In the training of members, spiritual means have the utmost importance, and among them rosary, eucharistic adoration, pilgrimage and spiritual exercises - following St. Ignatius of Loyola's method - are favored.

Alleanza Cattolica organizes conferences, workshops, lectures, meetings and training courses for individuals and groups, wherever people willing to listen are found.

These activities may concern general topics - mainly Christian and natural political culture - or historical events as well as news items, interpreting and judging them in the light of the changeless social moral.

Another activity of the association is editing and distributing the magazine Cristianità. The magazine follows - among other things - the course of the revolutionary process, exposing the damages it causes as well as the weaknesses and the connivance which favor it.

Besides, Alleanza Cattolica promotes books and texts, some of which are published by the publishing cooperative Cristianità.

Militants of Alleanza Cattolica originated – with others – the CESNUR (Center for Studies on New Religions), the IDIS (Institute for the Social Doctrine and Information), and the ISIN (Institute for the History of Italian Uprisings).

Alleanza Cattolica was constituted informally in 1960, and more formally in 1968. The association had a regulation (“Direttorio”) from 1977, and has had a statute since 1998.

Activities

Alleanza Cattolica organizes conferences, meetings and workshops on Christian and natural political culture, and on historical events or news items, interpreting and judging them in the light of the changeless social moral.

Among the subjects more often treated there are: Spirituality (Marian spirituality, rosary, eucharistic adoration); History (crusades, Inquisition, Protestantism, French Revolution, liberalism, Vendean genocide, Socialism, Communism, National socialism); Social Doctrine and Politics (the social doctrine of the Church, the principles of subsidiarity and solidarity, family, education, private property, divorce); Bioethics (education to love, the meaning of pain and death, contraception, abortion, artificial fertilization, euthanasia).

Particular attention is paid to the New Evangelization, to Religious freedom, and to New religious movements.

A report of the activities promoted or supported by the association can be regularly found in the magazine Cristianità, in the section “Buona battaglia”.

It is possible to ask the treatment of specific subjects either sending an e-mail or calling the association’s offices.
